Ingrid Mainland undertook her undergraduate studies in archaeology at Durham University, after which she moved to Sheffield, where she completed a PhD (1995) and held a British Academy Postdoctoral Fellowship (1995-1998). She has held a Lectureship in Environmental Archaeology at Bradford University since 1999 and is currently Lecturer in Archaeology in the Dept. of Archaeology, Orkney College/UHI Millennium Institute. Her research interests include zooarchaeology, palaeodiet, and education for sustainable development in archaeology, all with a North Atlantic emphasis.
